Fauci says 'no science' behind six-foot social distancing rule

The former NIAID director said he had nothing to do with the six-foot social distancing rule suggested at the outbreak of COVID in 2020.

Previously, Fauci testified before the body behind closed doors that he was not sure where the six-foot social distancing rules came from, telling committee lawyers that rule 'sort of just appeared.'

'You know, I don't recall. It sort of just appeared,' Fauci told the committee when pressed on how the rule came about during a closed-door January interview.
